BALD STORY

In the idea adopted by a barber in England that he now charges for his haircuts at a rate determined by the amount of time he spends over an individual head, instead of at the flat rate adopted every-

Musing over the idea, the suggestion seems more reasonable when you consider that the average barber can pollah off three baldheads in the time it takes to trim the more juxurlant locks of shockheaded

Looking at it another way, you might may the barber is adding input to injury by charging a flat rate, whether it be bald heads, tonsures, or thick growths. The bald man, a victim of habit or pride, instead of getting his wife to clean up the fluff on his neck still follows the habits of his early youth when his hair was thick and a crowning pride and goes off to the barber.

He sits in the chair and listens to the flatterer's tongue; "doca he want his half dozen hairs trimmed, cut short, or merely thinned?"

He gives due consideration to this weighty problem, and usually compromises by ordering a trim. The barber tries hard to lengthen the 60 seconds or so required to porform the task, and makes much play with the razor and soapsud closing episode which lengthens out the time, and then, crowning insuit, holds up the mirror for the unfortunate man to witness a sight he usually thuns. The glistening hairless view of his head. The Illusion is further sustained, however, when the patron approaches the cash desk, and throws down just as much money as Samson would have pald before Delllah went Into the hairdressing business. And then, crowning insult, the attendant walts by the door with an obsequious lear with his hand held out for a tip.

If the time process were intreduced into our barbers' shops at so much for every five minutes, an injustice which has spread over the centuries would be rectified, and baldreceive some compensation for the injured vanity they have endured in silence.

On the other hand, it must be said of Hongkong that the halrdressers are much more efficient and given to more kindly feelings

At least, the bald-headed do not have to sit in the chair and listen to a fast cracking salestries to sell them a hair restorer.

BOUGHT EIGHTY-TWO SHIRTS DURING VISIT contribution

to Hongkong

Washington, May 26. Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson disclosed today that he personally contributed towards boosting Hongkong's flourishing trade during his recent stopover in the Colony in the course of his 29,000-mile trip to the Far East.

The Vice-President told members of Washington's National Press Club, who were giving luncheon in his honour, that he had purchased no less than 82 shirts from one of Hongkong's most celebrated de luxe stores. At the end of the question and answers session, one reporter asked him of it were true that he had bought 45 shirts in Hongkong. Mr Johnson drew peals c laughter when he promptly replied "No, this is not correct. · If you want to know. I bought 82 shirts." He went on to explain that when he got to hotel room, he took off his coat and slipped on a sports shirt He then went to the Dynasty Shop a short while later to ponder over what kind of mementoes he could present to the secretaries, stenographers, crewmen, journalists, secre service men and other members of his entourage.

BAD TIME

Mr Johnson admitted he had bad time selecting the shirts and sizes, as about the only indication he had were his wife's estimates of measurements.

"The shirts cost me about four dollars apiece," he said, "and L guess the erroneous figure of 45 shirts stems from the fact that the first-rate British Secret service men who were accompanying me must have indulged in a traditional murder of a six-year-old British understatement when

AND SUNDAY MORNING (Roxy Majestic) This is a brilliantly produced tale of working class life in Nottingham, told without preaching, and revealing as no film has done before, exactly what makes the average youth of today, tick.

Albert Finney who handles the role of Arthur Senton in the film, portrays with exceptional brilliance a typical working class youth.

In the bleycle factory, ht carns £14 a week. None denies he is a good workman, and his financial freedom enables him to blast at the world, get drunk every Saturday night, and tumble into bed with his workmate's wife early every Sunday

Where is the moral of that? There is not one. Therefore the brilliance of both the novel and the film.

The central character is not without intelligence, but if I interpret what the author is getting at, it is this.

Modern youth, jiving, rebel-lious, loud-mouthed, is perfectly aware that a lifetime chained to the drudgery of a rapidly increasing automaton system in office or factory, is a demoralising prospect. Yet on the other hand the likelihood of relief from it via a hydrogen bomb is scarcely reassuring.

What then? Saturday nights and Sunday mornings until ... whoof! The bomb has taken over the role once saved 14 African murderess from the death ponaity.

The Circuit Court at Eshowe, Zudland, sentenced the Africans to terms of imprisonment ranging from 14 to eight years, for the murder in extenuating circumstances of two headmen during a hut-burning incident in the Nongomn District of Zululand last October.

Acting Justice Burne said the crime was inspired to a large extent by a genuine belief in the supernatural protection accorded to Kraals (African vilinges) by the spirits of their inhabitants' ancestors.

He added that this was combined with a belief that those who had accepted an improvement scheme for the district intended to deprive them of that protection.

NARROW ESCAPE

The judge added that "after considerable misglvings we have come to the conclusion that this is an extenuating circumstance." But, he commented, "you have escaped the death penalty by the narrowest

ABOVE: The Lancashire town of St Helens turned out on masse to welcome its team home from Wembley with the Rugby League cup. Some 20,000 jammed in front of the town hall, where the bus carrying the team was expected, and 10,000 more jammed the nearby streets. People caught in the squash began to faint-mostly women and children. Thirty police men operated a shuttle service to pass the victims over the heads of the crowds, some unconscious, some hysterical. The casualties, who totalled over 400, were carried or, led to the police-station-next-door to the town hall, and ambulance men and police worked non-stop to revive them. So thick was the crowd that the team's bus could not drive up to the front of the town hall for the welcome by the mayor—it went in by a back way.

A doctor for many years before he gave up medicine for fulltime writing, Brett Young described the novel as "the tribute of a renegade to the idealism of a profession he has deserted but which he still reveres." The story opens tonight on the evening of October 31, 1937, the elderly Dr Bradley's last day in practice. During the final hours in his old surgery he recalls the main events of his life - from his Shropshire childhood, through his Birmingham student days, marriage, and the death of his wife and his only son. At the same time it traces the evolution of medicine and surgery Fuller details of the pro- over fifty years. The story, grammes and advice on how to which is sometimes sentimental

For 20 hours they had been trapped on the seabed. They had tried every resource of machinery and ingenuity. None had offered the slightest hope of salvation. Then the captain called for prayers.

Not all the crew of the submarine Scal regarded the decision with favour. "Air and water are the things that count," said one. And not all those who wanted to join the prayers had the strength to drag themselves within earshot of the captain.

But many did pray with the captain. It was soon after the prayers had finished that two further, previously unconsidered actions which might have some infinitesimal effect on submarino's buoyancy were taken.

No doubt there are physical, mathematical reasons why those actions gave Seal the extra marginal lift required to free her. But there are men alive today, men who thought they would die below 90 ft. of water, who believe they experienced a miracle.

rawer redd w

FOR the men in the submarine Scal time was running out fast. Many of her crew were gasping for breath. Others were finding it difficult to keep awake.

Twenty hours had passed since the deafening explosion which had left her with her water-filled stern wedged deep in the mud of the sea-bed of the Kattegat.

Now the silent, insidious enemy, carbon dioxide, was asserting itself. One attempt at surfacing had failed. The air was deteriorating rapidly. Another attempt must be made very, very quickly, while the crew still had some of their failing strength left.

In the interval between the two attempts, a little extra water had been pumped out of the trimming system. Nobody expected that to achieve any fundamental improvement.

Lieut - Commander Rupert Lonsdale, the quiet, calm man who commanded Seal, on whom rested the responsibility for 60 men's lives, now took a drastic decision. Before making the new attempt he ordered Seal's dropkeel to be released.

It weighed II tons, It was so fitted that, in dire emergency, it could be detached from the hull and give the submarine an extra chance of lifting herself.

Throughout the boat men were apathetically accepting the inevitability of death. There really seemed to be nothing left, no other possi-bility to be worth while trying.

And in these circumstances there could be recourse only to humour and to idiosyncrasy and to routine.

In the petly officers mess Electrical Artificer Johnstone began removing first the sleeves and then the trousers of his overall suit.

"What the hell are you doing, Johnno?" he was asked.

"Changing into my Number Ones," he replied. And as soon as he had laboriously dressed himself in his best suit, he hoisted himself into his bunk and relaxed .... to wait.

Simultaneously E. R. A. "Tubby" Lister was trying to gather his strength for one form of action which might bring just a ray of hope.

"Engines," he said, addressing Clark, and using for the first time one of the nicknames which the engine-room ratings had for their engineer officer,"It's time to get out."

It was at this point that Murray suddenly remembered that there was one nirtank for'ard with a minute amount of air in it that he had not put on the line.

Gasning his intention to Lensdale he began strugglir ? up the rope, amid the sprawling bodies that covered the companionway.

With a superhuman effort he reached the crew space quickly and swung open the valve. There was renewed hissing and then ....unbelievably....the ingle started to alter.

In the motor-room Able Seaman Ritchio was aware of a Murray. They knew that the tremendous shaking and shudhigh-pressure hir was almost dering throughout the whole of the after part of Scal.

The submarine felt for a moment as though she was going completely. The fire had gone out on the port motor, but the exertion proved too much for the starboard motor as well and this now started smoking.

The levelling out brought with it a crop of fresh problems. surface.

Even if the movement of a few men a few feet for ard had been sufficient in terms of the cold theory of physics to cause Seal to surface, even if the sur-fecing itself were not miraculous, it was nevertheless true that the idea of employing human ballast—a not unknown one in the Submarine Servicehad not occurred to any of them during the long hours of their ordeal.

Perhaps it was the effect of the carbon dioxide that had inhibited creative thought. But whatever the reason, the belated inspiration had quite clearly been the right one. And many believed the source of the inspiration was the Almighty.

If the idea for a human action comes from God, this is the same as God acting Himself. So many of the complement of Seal said in 1940—and continue to say today.

Oddities

Think of the peculiarities of the British male dancer. In some ways he's the best in the world. There's no one to beat the zippy little man who slides about with a spotlight on his head carries off gold medals; kicking, reeling Scotsman; the Morris Dancers who jiggle through the streets in their white stockings with bells on the knees, like so many crozy hackneys; the maypole dancers weaving a tottery web of coloured ribbons as they creak round the maypole on various village greens. These last aren't very young -the modern generation doesn't go much for skipping around with bits of ribbon. But they are pretty nippy and keep in time with the flute or whatever it is they dance to.

Even our jazz fans are firstclass as they fling each other. around and do as much footwork as is possible in winklepickers. Why then should all husbands, begin.

An invitation to a date usually I means going to the movies. If the couple wants to be more sophisticated, they can achieve this by going to more expensive forms of entertainment, but only if and when the burden of finance is shared equally.

If a girl gees out with a boy, surely it is because she likes his cempany, although at times, there may be some long term planning involved. In Genesis, Chapter 2, we read of how God created Eve so that Adam might Instead of jostling with the populace, a sharing of the finances will enable the couple to mix with the elite of society.

Att Garden of Eden.

Garden of Eden.

Ever since then, men and women have been meant for each other. The company of boys and kirls, man and women is meant to be shared from the cradle to the grave. It would be a shame therefore. It is important to realise that because of financial reasons.

It is important to realise that college dating is an ideal starting point for social education. Its importance in giving a chance of getting to know the oppositic sex chould not be jeopardized in any way, especially for maturing adolescents.

Any lack of social contact and mutual understanding could be remedied by Dutch Treat. This doubles the chances of contact by a sharing of burden halved, and the burden halved matically contributes towards a doubling of dates.

Equality

Thus the new role provides for the girl a new equality by action and a new equality by ending the archaic traditional role.

Therefore from this release of herself as a financial burden, she will seize hold of the mitiative and cast off her traditional tive and cast off her traditional the opposite sex. Throughout history a woman's role has been a passive and a dominated one. She has been plagued by the double standard of morality and exportunity. It has been argued that by not being equal, the woman has been treated as an inferior.

But the weaker sex has resisted this role in their voting rights, careers and in their particulation of the same social functions and events.

Thus in the first half of the 20th century, much has been realized of women's desire to compete equally with her male counterpart and enjoy the same rights and privileges.

However, equality of responsibility. We have agreed with and given the demands for new rights, but we now advocate the slinks, but we now advocate the sirils to pay.

Early next week Hongkong's own singing star, Miss Kong Ling, will return after a successful six months visit to the U.S.A:

It has just been learned that Kong Ling made her TV debut on May 19, and that the reception was overwhelming. As you all probably know Kong Ling was invited to appear in Arthur Godfrey's TV show, when the latter visited the Colony last year.

The Americans loved her, the critics gave her first class reviews and Godfrey was so pleased that he has asked her to make a return appearance in the autumn.

A friend of mine who watched the show wrote to me saying, "Great! That's the only word! can describe Kong Ling's appearance in Godfrey's show ..... Ever since then Kong Ling has been the talk of the town ....."

Prior to the big TV show, Kong Ling appeared various radio shows and was heard by millions Americans.

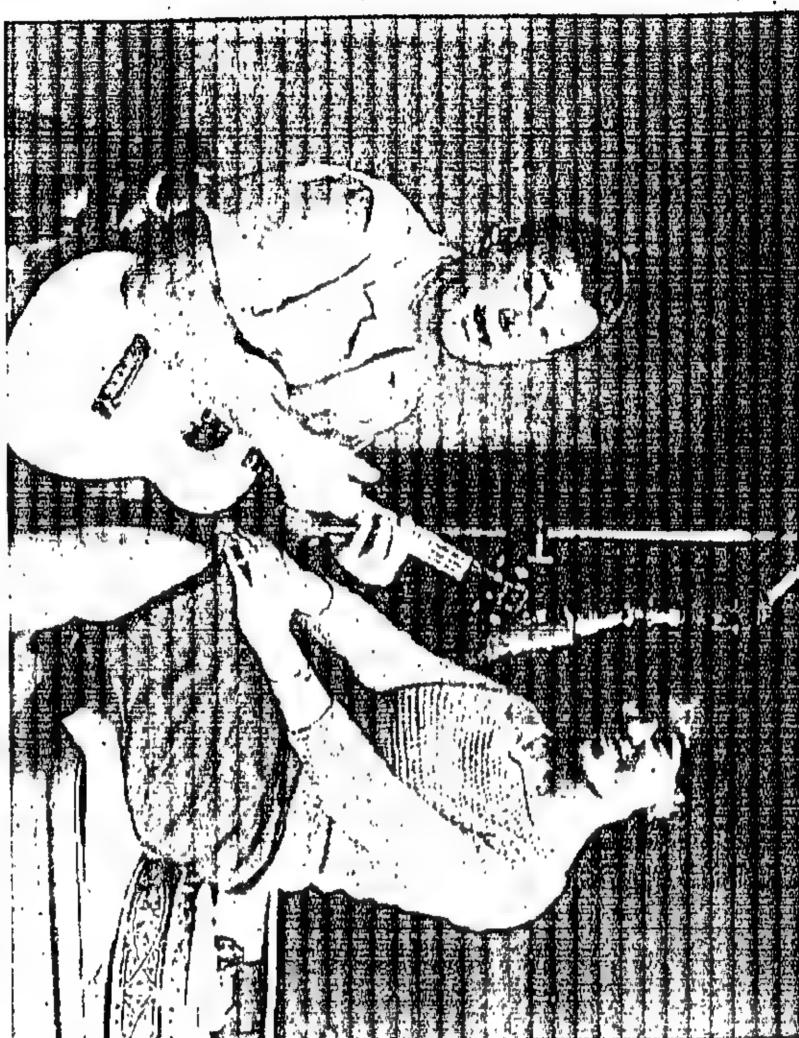

Her popularity was confirmed when she sang before a packed-house of over a thousand at one of Miami's leading clubs.

The audience was fascinated by the Oriental singer and she was warmly applauded. She received several encores!

So after six exciting, eventful and successful months in America, Kong Ling returns.

Will she perform here once again? What are her future plans?

I hope to have these questions answered when Kong Ling returns next week.

YVONNE MUTCHELL—AT THE PEAK OF HER CAREER-FINDS THE ANSWER TO THE BIG QUESTION EVERY STAR MUST FACE ....

men is the QUITO time

WVONNE MITCHELL is giving up acting. Today she is house-hunting in the South of France looking for an isolated villa where she can get right away from the world of the stage and cinema. Her plan: To write books.

Miss Mitchell has made this decision at a time when she is at the peak of her acting career. She won top honours at the Berlin festival and has just turned down offers of a Broadway play and a Hollywood film.

Her reasons? "I no longer need to stand on a stage and shout. I have decided that there are other things in the world than sitting in a fashionable flat earning a lot of money.

"It is an enormous decision, But now it's made I don't feel as if I am sinking. I feel as if I am floating on air."

Stardom

What makes an actress of 35, on the verge of international stardom, suddenly decide to chance her future like this?

Miss Mitchell explained it like this: "I would feel terrible if I were going at a time when I was miserable and out of a job That would seem like a defeat This is the time to go-now. when I feel happy, reasonably successful.

TIMID MIDDLE-ORDER BATTING THEM OF VICTORY OVER AUSTRALIANS

Bristol, May 26. Gloucestershire missed a great chance of becoming the first side to beat the 1961 Australian touring cricket team here today when timid middle-order batting let them down after openers David Carpenter and Martin Young had given them a great start to their task of scoring 279 on the last day with a century partnership.

THE "MEMOVOX" WRIST ALARM

A Second Memory for Your Busiest Day

You can count on the "Memovox" wrist alarm to guide you faithfully through your busiest day. With a discreet buzz, the "Memovox" remembers your appointments, conferences, interviews... every item on the day's schedule. Acting as your second memory, the "Memovox" wakes, warns and reminds... allows you at long last to concentrate freely on your work. Those distracting, anxious glances at your watch belong to the past.

The "Memovox" is a high precision timekeeper, accurate, faithful and beautifully finished. At home, in the office or on the golf course, you will discover a wonderful new freedom with the "Memovox".

The various Memovox models share a characteristic feature: the mobile concentric disk which sets the alarm. This ingenious arrangement greatly enhances legibility of dial by eliminating confusing extra hand.

With only Cecil Cook, who has no pretensions as a batsman, to come and another over to play out, Gloucestershire would have been hard pressed had Benaud taken the chance.

Too cautious

Most of the blame for the Gloucestershire failure to take up the challenge must rest with acting captain Arthur Milton. After Carpenter and Young had become the first opening pair to take a century partnership off the Australians this season, Milton inspired the other batsmen to become much cautious and they fell well behind the clock.
